

When I first went on the Internet some years ago, I used AOL. I soon became disenchanted with same when they continued to have pop-up ads and such, so changed to a local, independent company called SONIC. I love them, no pop-ups, great service from their techs, etc. They are priceless and reasonable. I wish to keep them for years to come. No government control is needed or wanted. Independent companies should be allowed to keep giving the fine service they have provided continued to provided. Thank you.
